Sculpture Adoption Registration

At Creative nature HQ, we aim to find good homes for sculptures created by our community wood carving and willow weaving programme.

We are looking to develop relationships with local organisations who will give a home to these pieces of work, look after them and raise awareness of our project.

The project is about bringing people together, learning new skills, being part of something sustainable and connecting us all to our inherent creativity.

How it works

- Register your interest and give us your details and the proposed location of the artwork.
- Elect a project champion who will be our point of contact for the whole process.

Moving the work

Once we allocate you a piece of work, your organisation has the responsibility to arrange the moving and installation of the work. This is a very important part of taking ownership of the work. Sorting the logistics of the work brings our teams together and transfers the responsibility to you.

Celebrate its arrival

As an adopter, we encourage you to organise a celebration to acknowledge all the hard work, love and dedication that has gone into the piece. This is an opportunity to create a story and build upon this for the benefit of both organisations.

Our organisation has no core funding and relies on bookings for our courses to fund this project. We look to the members of your network and your wider circle to support our project and get involved with our courses. Come and carve and weave and learn to make together.

Because our organisation relies on paid participation, this circular experience-based economy is looking, all the time, to expand our connections, celebrating these acts of generosity, encouraging and offering specialist skills and knowledge to all we work with.

We finance our projects by giving experiences to people, bringing them together in a creative and inspiring space where they are exposed to new people, ideas and skills.

We share experiences, joy and reveal our creative natures.

So thank you for your support and we look forward to working with you very soon.
